The alarm was sounded this Thursday morning for a fire at the home of Lester Mason, Northwest Bethel. On arrival the fire crew discovered the fire to be confined to the chimney, with no damage.

BETHEL BASEBALL ORGANIZES

—GOOD TEAM ASSURED

Bethel town team held a very interesting meeting Tuesday evening at the Legion rooms. Election of officers was as follows:

President—Lloyd Luxton
Secretary-Treasurer—Gerard Williams
Business Manager—Donald Stanley

Field Captain—John Maguire
Asst. Field Captain—Jack Gill
More than the usual enthusiasm was shown, and from all reports the best team in many years will represent Bethel the coming season. At present, it is questionable whether they will play Independent or League ball, but fans may be assured there will be a number of changes in regard to management and procedure at games, which will be beneficial to those interested in this form of sport.

In most towns of this size there has been enough interest in baseball shown so by some means the townspeople have got together and a good ball diamond and play ground has been made available. This matter was discussed at length, and we would appreciate hearing the opinion of some of the fans.

MYSTERY CLUB PLAY

A SUCCESS

The presentation of the Mystery Club's first offering, "Here Comes Patricia," was generally acclaimed a success by local theatre-goers here in Bethel Wednesday evening.

A well filled hall attested to the townspeople's desire for good lively plays that offer an evening of well-spent entertainment. Concurrent opinion seems to find it hard to distinguish between the abilities of the several teams of actors, as all seemed to try to give their best for the good of the show as a whole and their own roles as a unit.

Special praise, and also the Mystery Club's wholehearted thanks, go to the young people who contributed the specialties as well as the most able accompaniment of Mrs. Doris Lord. The intermission before curtain call was filled by the Bethel Band, who also came in for an ample share of thanks, under the splendid direction of Myron Scarborough.

Some of the interesting and laughable highlights of the play included the most successful conquest of Elbert (John King) by Elsie Crowder (Virginia Smith), and of Angellina's (Libby Lyon) frantic and sometimes violent attempts to have Bud Flannigan (Dick Young) to herself long enough to accept a proposal before Minnie Knoop (Christie Thurston) butted in. Everyone felt sorry for poor Jimmy Clark (Charlie Smith) with a peepery and vociferous boss such as Adam Wade (Charles Freeman) to berate him at every turn and try to spoil his romance with that vicious and plucky heroine Patricia (Marguerite Hall) who saw her worlds and conquered them. Last but not least by any means were the two who tied the trend of the story together, lovable and kindly Mrs. Carrol (Marjorie Freeman) and that homey everyday personage Tim Hopper (Howard Thurston), who was constantly badgered by a member of the town's aristocracy, Mrs. Smith-Porter (Rebecca Gordon).

It is your writer's humble opinion that the Mystery Club should further its glorious start and furnish us with some more good wholesome entertainment.

The last week's weather has been varied—including snow, rain, and sleet—warm and cold—and back today to snow and rain again. Much snow still remains in the fields and woods.

A TRIBUTE

In the passing of Dr. Frank E. Hanscom, Bethel has again suffered an irreparable loss. His like we shall see no more.

Dr. Hanscom came to Bethel forty-three years ago to take charge of Gould Academy when its fortunes were at their lowest ebb. His previous experience well fitted him for the task of rehabilitating the school, and to this task he gave the best he had. Never by word or look did he indicate that he found the task almost insurmountable. Steadily but tactfully he steered his course between public criticism and the skepticism of a faithful but disillusioned Board of Trustees, and only those of us who were with him during those early days can realize the problems he faced. But Dr. Hanscom had hitched his wagon to a star, and the splendid school of today bears eloquent testimony to his genius for organization and his great ability to follow through to his goal.

Dr. Hanscom had a great gift for imparting knowledge. More than one of his pupils has said "I never knew anything about Latin, English, Algebra, or this or that subject until Mr. Hanscom taught me. I owe the foundation of my education to him." He had an unfailing interest in and affection for young people. He had a deep understanding of their problems and trials. It was easy for him to win their confidence and assure them of his sympathy and help. He had the happy faculty of reaching down to the level of their needs, and as Kipling puts it, he neither "looked too good, nor talked too wise." Dignified and graceful, he was a living example of a real gentleman. The ambition he aroused and the trust he inspired were important aspects in his success as a teacher.

To the affairs of the town, he brought the same farsighted interest. Anything pertaining to the life of the village or to civic improvement received his help and encouragement. He felt it was the duty of every citizen to take an active part in town management. He believed that open and intelligent discussion was the best way to secure good government. He once said that affairs of state were better run when old and young met around the air tight stove and the cracker barrel in the country store to discuss the burning questions of the day.

His religion was a vital part of his life and while he made no parade of it, one could feel the deep Christian faith by which he lived.

Dr. Hanscom was a man of great reserve. Having many resources within himself, he reposed his confidence in only a few close friends and his adored family.

One of the best neighbors who ever lived, his kindness was expressed in deeds not words. His friendship was a boon to be cherished and enjoyed.

He had a gentle and subtle wit that was the delight of all who came under its spell. His intellectual powers were remarkable. He was a poet of no mean ability, and his prose was polished and pertinent. As a public speaker he had few equals. His simple, sincere style of expression carried conviction and appeal.

Educated largely by his own efforts, Dr. Hanscom's achievements were an inspiration to those whose opportunities like his were somewhat limited.

His home life was beautiful and alluring. His wife was constantly at his side sharing his labors and triumphs. His sons and daughters, children to gladden a father's heart. He claimed as friends and associates, men and women of high standing in educational, social, and

CUTTING TO SPEAK ON CUTTING PULP WOOD

A. D. Nutting, forestry specialist, is to be here next week for meetings on Selective Cutting of Pulpwood. The tentative schedule includes meetings at Bethel, Rumford, North Paris, and possibly Waterford or Hiram. The meetings at Bethel and Rumford will be held on Thursday, April 25, in the forenoon and afternoon, respectively. The other two meetings will be held on Friday. The discussion will take place in woodlots where pulp is to be cut or where it is available to cut. They are being held just prior to the peeling season to stimulate interest in conserving forests, which is one of the most, if not the most, valuable natural resource in Oxford County.

Until lately there has been a market for only softwood pulp. This encouraged the leaving of hardwood standing, which helped to prevent the forest land from washing and entire destruction of the woodland. Now that there is a market for hardwood pulp, there is a feeling that more stripping will take place. This sale of hardwood pulp can and should be a benefit to Oxford County woodland owners. It is essential, however, that it is cut conservatively so that there will always be a potential income to farmers from their forests.

KATHRYN HERRICK ACCEPTS EAST AFRICA POSITION

A letter recently received by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Herrick from their daughter, Miss Kathryn Herrick, who has been in London, England, since last fall, states that she has accepted the position of teacher of French and Music in the Kaptagat School, Eldoret, Kenya Colony, British East Africa.

At the time of writing her plans were to take a ship from a French Mediterranean port on April 24, as American authorities would not allow her to take passage on a British ship direct from England. Under present war conditions it is not unlikely that these plans may be changed.

financial fields and he shared with them, those qualities of heart and mind which endeared him to them. Dr. Hanscom's philosophy of life was well expressed by one of his favorite poets—Sam Walter Foss. The following verse in its little frame, hung near his desk for years:

Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by—
The men who are good and the men who are bad,
As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in the scorners' seat

Or hurl the cynic's ban—
Let me live in a house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

Hundreds of his former pupils will mourn his passing and realize that they have, indeed, lost a friend.

FRANK E. HANSCOM

Frank E. Hanscom, principal emeritus of Gould Academy, died at his home here at 3.15 p. m. April 11. He suffered a heart attack three days before his death.

He was born in West Poland, March 24, 1863, the son of Edward H. and Emeline McCann Hanscom. He attended Bridgton and Hebron Academies, received the degree of Master of Arts from Bates College in 1899 and a similar degree from Bowdoin College in 1907. In 1931 he was awarded the degree of Doctor of Education from Bates College.

Before his appointment to the principalship of Gould Academy in 1897, Mr. Hanscom held similar positions at Gorham, Casco and Oxford High Schools and was superintendent of schools in Poland and Mechanic Falls. He retired four years ago.

From 1892 to 1905 he was the proprietor and manager of the Maine Teachers Agency and was the president of the Oxford County Teachers Association.

Actively interested in community affairs Mr. Hanscom was the president of the Bethel Library Association, a clerk in the village corporation 40 years and a deacon in the Congregational Church.

He was president of the Bethel National Bank, and a past president of the Lion's club. Politically he was a Republican.

An antique hobbyist, Mr. Hanscom had gained State-wide recognition for his collection.

Survivors include his widow, Ella Davis, whom he married in Mechanic Falls, Aug. 22, 1899; two sons, Robert Hanscom, Ashburnham, Mass., and Edward Hanscom of Bethel; three daughters, Mrs. Kathryn Bailey, Miss Margaret Hanscom and Miss Dorothy Hanscom, all of Bethel; three grandchildren, Margaret and Virginia Hanscom and Carroll Bailey; a brother, George W. Hanscom of Casco; a half sister, Mrs. Emma Cameron of Mechanic Falls and two step-brothers, Alfred Snell of Mechanic Falls and Win Snell of Webb's Mills.

Services were held Sunday afternoon from the Congregational church with Rev. Herbert T. Wallace officiating, and a eulogy by Leon Walker of Portland. The bearers were nephews, Harold Hanscom, Lawrence Hanscom, Fred Hanscom and Donald Hanscom. Others were Orrell Anderson, Clayton Fossett and Wilbur Myers. Interment was at Riverside cemetery.

DONALD MacMILLAN LECTURE MAY 9

Commander MacMillan will give his lecture on the Arctic region, illustrated with slides and moving pictures, at the William Bingham Gymnasium on Thursday evening, May 9.

The Parent-Teacher Association which is sponsoring this entertainment solicits the cooperation of the citizens of Bethel and surrounding towns in bringing this entertaining and instructive program to the people of this section.

BARBARA FAYE BRYANT

Barbara Faye Bryant died Tuesday, April 9, at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Addie Raimay, on the Gore road. She was born Jan. 27, 1929, the daughter of Herman and the late Lillian Flint Bryant.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at Greenleaf's funeral home, Mrs. Eugene Norton officiating. Interment was at Norway.

40 YEARS AGO in NEWS

April 18, 1900

Calvin Blabbe has purchased the Rink lot on Main street, and will proceed at once to the erection of a grain mill and storehouse thereon. It is Mr. Blabbe's purpose to construct a building as near fire proof as it is possible to do, and to this end it will be strictly iron-clad. The work will be pushed to a rapid completion and will, it is hoped, be ready for occupancy within two months.

Mr. Andrew Twitchell, Bethel's oldest citizen, died at his home in Northwest Bethel, last Sunday (April 16, 1900), having arrived within three miles of the century mark.

THE OXFORD COUNTY UNITED PARISH NEWS NOTES THE COMING WEEK:

Thursday, the 18th, there will be

Y. A.'s were scheduled to meet in Waterford. Also that evening a Pilgrim Fellowship play rehearsal in Lovell.

Sunday there will be a union meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship of the Parish. The place is Stoneham, the Stoneham group is in charge.

Monday, the 22nd, the Stoneham Church Cabinet will meet.

Tuesday, the 23rd, is the date for the North Waterford Circle Supper.
Also that evening a Lovell Cabinet meeting is planned.

On Thursday evening, the 25th, the Lovell Y. A.'s meet in the Vest-ry.

Looking ahead. The parish goes on May Day having Time Sunday, the 25th of this month.

THE PAST WEEK:

We were glad to welcome back Rev. George Gledhill who visited friends in the Parish last week.

Late last Sunday evening and early Monday morning Rev. Hen-sell Colby, Rev. Warren Palmer, Rev. George Gledhill, the Editor of the Advertiser and the ministers of the Parish met for a social occasion.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

USE THE SHADOWS TOO

Shadows tell the story here. Learn to observe shadows and create shadow effects. They lead to more interesting pictures.

SHADOWS are important in a picture—in fact, just as important at times as the brightly lighted areas. Observe shadows—use them judiciously—and your pictures will be more effective.

Every artist knows that a strong shadow can be used to make a subject stand away from a background.
The shadow gives an effect of depth or "third dimension," even though the picture is actually on a flat sheet of canvas or paper.

Shadows, when used properly, also give an effect of roundness or "modeling" to a subject. By placing a light at the proper angle, often a rather flat subject can be made to seem well rounded. If the subjects are some of your pictures seem flat and lacking in "third dimension," maybe you just haven't been placing your photo lights in the best positions.

There's a special use, too, for shadows cast on a background. Sometimes they can be made to bring out the idea or "story" of a picture. For example, in the statuette shot above, the shadow shows the action clearly—more clearly than the subjects themselves.

To obtain a sharp, clean-cut shadow on a background, use a
flectors, will give a double shadow.
Many novel effects can be worked out. However, you must remember that a reflector multiplies the light from a photo bulb. Therefore, when you omit the reflector, exposure must be increased. Short "time" exposures will usually be needed with inexpensive cameras. Try one to two seconds, with a box camera and high speed film, when a small
No. 1 photo bulb is used five or six feet from the subject. Of course, have the camera on a firm support.
The closer the photo bulb is to the camera, the "flatter" the lighting. As the bulb is moved around toward the side of the subject, the lighting becomes more contrasty and shadows are broader. When using "side lighting," make sure that direct light doesn't shine into the camera lens.

Experiment with shadows. It's interesting—and it will lead you to better pictures.

GEORGE A. MUNDT UNIT No. 81

The George A. Mundt Unit, No.
81, entertained the second district council Saturday, April 13, at their rooms.

The meeting was conducted by Mary Dumas, State Vice-President, of Lisbon Falls. Four units were represented and each gave reports on their various activities. Janis Starbird, Dixfield, acted as secretary in the absence of the regular secretary, Arlene Jordan. Florence Childs, past president of the Dix-field Unit, rendered an account of the reception held in honor of Mrs.
Charles Gilbert, National Vice-President, at Bath.

An invitation to attend the Tri-Council, May 2, at Rumford was read. This will also be observed as gentlemen's night. Agnes Bradley, past State President, of Rum-ford will be in charge of the occasion. A thousand guests are expected, including many distinguished department officers of both the Legion and Auxiliary. Remarks from past State Vice-President Olive Lurvey were heard, also district welfare chairman Marjorie McAllister and Alternate Vice-President Fannie Cummings were given at this time. A program consisting of the following was given: piano solo, Beatrice Forbes; vocal solo, Pearl Daye; vocal solo, Maude Bean. The meeting was followed by a supper.

The regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary will be held at the Legion rooms April 25.
The meeting will be in charge of Frances Bennett, child welfare chairman.

JACKSON-SILVER UNIT No. 68

Next regular meetings of both Post and Unit will be Friday evening, April 19. It being Patriots' Day, the committee, consisting of those having April birthdays, will have as special guest Everett Foster, Chef de Gare, Oxford County Volunteer 613, of Dixfield, who will speak on "Patriotism." Special refreshments and a short program will be had.

Comrade Alfred Andrews returned home Friday from the Veterans Facility at Togus, seemingly much improved. Comrade Perham is expected to remain in the hospital several weeks longer.

The George A. Mundt Unit proved to be the usual good hostess when they entertained the Second District Council Saturday, April 13.
Due to the inclement weather there was a smaller attendance than was expected.

President Mary Dumas of Lisbon Falls conducted an enthusiastic meeting and urged all who could to visit the Veterans Hospital in Togus on May 12, which is Hospital Day. The Rumford Times has been sent to the sick comrades there for one year and it was voted to send several boxes of matches which they need.

Mrs. Childs of the Dixfield Unit gave an interesting report of the meeting in Bath last Thursday to receive the National Vice-President of Connecticut.

Junior Past District Vice-President Olive Lurvey responded with pleasing remarks.

After a very fine program a delicious supper was served, consisting of a variety of salads, hot rolls, pickles, coffee and cake. Large bouquets of pussy-willows as center pieces were cheerful reminders that spring was really here in spite of the snow storm outside.

Members of Jackson-Silver Unit present were Mrs. Flora Cummings, Mrs. Fannie Cummings and Mrs. Ina Smith.

Baseball Men Work Out in the Gym

The season opens April 27, when the locals are booked to travel to Norway, not only for the first game but also for a League encounter.

In the gymnasium not much can be definitely determined, but the pitching hopefuls for the year seem to be far ahead of where they were at this time last year. Tucker is preparing himself to take the mound at odd times and should prove real helpful. Jenks has a fast ball and plenty of stuff and could help solve many of the coaching headaches were he to set his mind on winning a pitching job.

Roberts has been out but once but displayed a fast ball that should baffle the opponents. Barker, a freshman, has taken his training seriously and much will be seen of him in the next four seasons. Clayton Crockett has not reported for practice as yet but should aid the cause greatly if he decided to play ball this season. Billings and Adams are the leading contenders for the back-stop position and have shown plenty of spirit in practice.

Both are unexperienced but will learn fast once the team is able to move out-of-doors.

The infield will be well taken care of by Gavel, Howe, Wentzel, Swan, Clough, Robertson, and Coolidge, and the pitchers not working on a particular day will have to patrol the outer gardens. Tucker and C. Crockett have had much experience "chasing" them and will be found in left or center field when not doing their chore on the mound.

The schedule for the year is as follows:

Sat., April 27, at Norway, 2.30.
Sat., May 4, Practice game at Rumford.

Wed., May 8, at South Paris.
Sat., May 11, Gorham at Bethel.

Wed., May 15, Norway at Bethel.
Sat., May 18, Fryeburg at Bethel.

Wed., May 22, Mechanic Falls at Bethel, 3.30.
Wed., May 29, South Paris at Bethel, 3.15.

Sat., June 1, at Gorham.
Wed., June 5, at Fryeburg.

Thurs., June 6, Alumni at Bethel.

Testing Auto Drivers

Isaac Hart, 46 years old, of Trenton, N. J., who was granted his first automobile driver's license in 1919 and has driven for 20 years with "no one knowing and evidently not caring whether I was capable of driving or not," has offered to take a physical examination to determine his fitness. In a letter to Arthur W. Magee, state motor vehicle commissioner Hart said he hoped to "start a movement through which every driver of an automobile in the United States will be compelled to pass a periodic test proving his fitness to drive."

Building the Lily

From tiny bulb to flowering plant within 30 days is the record of this amaryllis, grown in a display room in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago. The Lily, measured by Julia McCarthy, grew without soil or sunshine, its roots immersed in a solution of plant growing chemicals.

New Bathroom Accessories

For years china dominated the bathroom scene, but recently bathroom accessories have appeared in metals, plastics and glass to challenge china's monopoly. Towel bars, soap dishes and other accessories now add color and life to the bathroom, as the choice of materials has widened to fit every requirement and color. Old bathrooms may be modernized and brought up to date with these new fixtures and accessories. Not only is new beauty introduced but such striking color accents, but utility is heightened in modern bathroom accessories. Many of the new models are of unbreakable and nonshattering materials.

Closet Lights Prove Helpful

Proper lighting for the closets in a home is a necessity often overlooked but one which can prove a bothersome nuisance. Solution to the problem is a single one through selection from many available methods. A ceiling light in a closet may have a pull chain or wall switch. This light may be forgotten, however, and burn for hours. A switch outside the closet door may be equipped with a pilot light which glows red when the light in the closet is on. Another satisfactory method is installation of a door switch which automatically turns the light in the closet off when the door is closed. A light which burns for a stated time and then automatically turns off is still another satisfactory method of closet lighting.

The Fashion Frock Of The Week

EMPIRE WAISTLINE EFFECT
As worn in Hollywood by BINNIE BARNES
Glamorous Screen Celebrity

If one is looking for a dramatic style, this latest one from Paris is the answer. It gives the wearer a feeling that one is fashionably dressed. Perhaps it's the Empire waistline effect or some of the other fashion details. But whatever it is, that sense of smartness is evident in every line. This week's frock has a lovely notch collar that can be worn open or closed. Fabric-covered buttons lend to the beauty of the high Empire waistline. The dainty, self-fabric belt has a clasp buckle, fabric-covered to match the buttons. Shallow pockets, adorned with buttons, are charming aids of flattery to the hips, as are the draped folds in the skirt. The glove-length sleeves are details of distinction that are seen on the most ultra fashionable frocks. The material and color are of prime importance. Miss Barnes wears here of rayon in a haze blue. Another good shade is rose red.

Wallpaper's Varied Uses

Wallpaper's primary use is as a covering for the walls, but there are many other functions this material may serve. Manufacturers are promoting the use of wallpaper as a ceiling covering on the basis that it substitutes decorative interest for bare white "nothingness." Rooms gain in unity and effectiveness, they say, by the use of an appropriate ceiling paper blending into the walls. The interior of cupboards offers opportunity for effective wallpaper use. Modern paper designs form excellent backgrounds for china, as well as emphasizing the character and color scheme of the dining room and kitchen. Clothes closets are now being wallpapered, either to carry on the treatment of the room or to contrast with it. Unfinished plaster closets appear bare and incongruous when closet doors are left open.

X-Rays of Old Paintings

Help in Detecting Frauds

An exhibit of specialized X-ray films at Harvard university shows that several paintings, traditionally attributed to the Flemish master, Rembrandt, may really have been the work of his pupil, Ferdinand Bol.

On one disputed picture, a portrait of "Saskia," the underpainting is weak and experts believe Bol may have done that part of the work and Rembrandt finished it. The shadow-graphs show that Bol's underpainting usually was cruder and less decisive than the master's.

Harvard has more than 3,200 X-ray studies of paintings and they are expected to help in detecting forgery, determining authorship of pictures, and discovering whether they have been touched up.

One study reveals that the "Vision of a Monk" was painted about 1700, but that years later a pillar and an angel were added. An angel also was added to the Fifteenth Century picture, "Annunciation to the Madonna of Her Approaching Death."

The X-rays also reveal how artists change their minds while painting—rearranging figures or changing the pattern of the work-in-progress.

Lynn's fingers returned to the telephone, but her eyes were on Rundhia. The threat of the telephone no longer worked. He nodded. "Go ahead," he said. "Phone the President, if you care to. I wanted to keep you out of it, but do as you please."

Lynn stood up. "No," she answered. "I will write to Captain Norwood. I will ask him to come and see me. Perhaps my evidence would help him. At the very least, I can tell him how sorry I am."

"Lynn dear," said the Maharane.

But Lynn was resolute. She wouldn't listen to her. "May I have pen, ink and paper?"

No one answered. Lynn tugged open the drawer of the writing table, pulled out paper, sat there and began to write. She laid the note she had addressed to Aunt Harding on the desk. In her haste, she splashed ink on the envelope. When she had finished her letter to Norwood, she turned the letter to Rundhia. She threw Aunt Harding's letter into the wastebasket. She turned both letters face downward on the blotter while she searched for envelopes. There were none in the desk drawer. She asked Rundhia for envelopes. He found two. She inserted the letters, sealed up the envelopes and addressed them. Rundhia walked out of the room.

"I have sent him," said the Maharane. "To find a reliable messenger, who will know how to find Captain Norwood if he is not at his camp."

Lynn gave both letters to the Maharane.

"Darling," said the Maharane. "Rundhia desires you so much that you could persuade him to do anything."

Lynn stared. "Do you think I could persuade him to try to prove Captain Norwood's innocence?"

"But Lynn dear, if Captain Norwood has been guilty of taking a bribe—"

Lynn interrupted. "I don't believe Captain Norwood is guilty."

"But what do you know about him?"

"Maharane dear, what do you know about me? How do you know I'm not a criminal?"

"Lynn—"

"Maharane dear, even if Captain Norwood could be guilty of an unjustly, mean thing like taking a bribe, it was I who betrayed him and I want him to know it. If he isn't guilty—"

The door opened suddenly. Rundhia entered followed by an attendant in the Maharajah's livery.

"Yes," said the Maharane. "That man can be trusted. Lynn dear, I will give him both your letters. He will find Captain Norwood, even if he has to hunt all over Kadur."

She gave the man emphatic orders in his own language, told him to go at once, watched him along the corridor and led Lynn through the brass gate to the women's quarters.

Rundhia waited standing. When he heard the messenger's footfall returning along the corridor he opened the door, admitted him, closed the door, held out his hand, received both letters, glanced at them, and returned to the messenger the one that was addressed to Mrs. Harding.

"Deliver that one. After that, keep out of sight for an hour. Then return and say that you have delivered the other letter to Captain Norwood. Go."

Rundhia read the letter that was addressed to Norwood. He smiled. There was no heading.

"Your kindness about what you saw this morning does not make me wish to hurt you in return. There is something I wish to tell you. It is important. I hate myself for something that I said unintentionally, under great strain. I can explain it. Won't you see me?"

"Lynn."

CHAPTER XIII

The Bengali doctor entered Rundhia's suite at the palace with the air of a crook who is afraid of a master-crook. He assumed an air of self-importance that he didn't feel; of confidence that didn't exist. He didn't wait for Rundhia to tell him to be seated, and he began to speak in Bengali.

Rundhia interrupted him: "You may discontinue dosing Mrs. Harding. Miss Lynn Harding has accepted an invitation to remain here at the palace, so the sooner the aunt clears out of Kadur the better. Let her get well."

"She has refused medicine. I had to put it on her breakfast food. And now she won't eat. She will recover quickly enough! There is nothing much the matter with her. I am relieved. I do not like to do such things to western people."

"Could you get at Captain Norwood?"

"No."

"I think you'd better. Last night at supper, Norwood watched your clumsy by-play when you gave that pellet to Mrs. Harding. The way you switched the pellets wasn't clever. Norwood suspects you."

"Captain Norwood is himself under suspicion," the Bengali answered.

"He stands accused, does he not, of having accepted a bribe? You told me to say so to Mrs. Harding. And I did."

"Yes. I was coming to that," Rundhia interrupted. "I thought the news might influence her to keep Norwood away. Now, look here: officers caught taking bribes, especially if they're popular and well connected, very often commit suicide. Norwood's suicide would be appropriate, convenient and, in the circumstances, not suspicious. How do we go about it?"

"We don't!" the Bengali answered, without a moment's hesitation.

Rundhia stared at him scornfully. "Well," he remarked at last, "it might be dangerous to do. You and I must be careful."

The Bengali folded his hands across his stomach. "Very careful." "Things mustn't be traced back to us," said Rundhia. "There is nothing, so far, that can be traced back to me. But I have the goods on you, and by God, if you don't do what I tell you, you're in trouble."

Fear looked forth from the Bengali's eyes, but he said nothing. He crossed his knees and waited.

"Norwood has got to be killed," said Rundhia. "He is in love with Miss Lynn Harding. He hates me. He is suspicious by nature. He is on the defensive. And he is the type of person whose idea of self-defense is to attack with every scrap of energy he has. That kind of person is much too dangerous. You and I can't afford to let him live. If we can blame his death on the priests, that could be made to hold water. The priests bribed him. By this time, they probably know that the news of the bribe is out. It would be natural for them to murder Norwood, to stop his mouth."

"Well, why not let them? Why not leave it to them?" the Bengali retorted.

"Because they won't do it, you fool! Did you ever know a priest to do a thing at the right time to suit someone else? It will have to be done for them. Now here's the idea: they keep a hospice where mendicants may live as long as they please, for no payment. There are three men in that hospice, who would kill their mothers and anyone else for an ounce of opium. For two ounces, they would murder ten children a piece. You know my man Gulbaz?"

"Too well. Some day that bad-mash will turn on you."

Rundhia smiled. "Long before that, dear doctor, he shall swallow one of your prescriptions! Summon Gulbaz. Give him money. I will give you three hundred rupees, and you may keep the change. Tell Gulbaz he is to hire those three men to assassinate Norwood tonight. I don't care how they do it, and I hope they get caught. They have been living for months in the temple hospice. Everyone will believe they are in the pay of the priests. Do you understand?"

"I understand you. I won't do it. I have done what I have done, because you knew of former indiscretions, for which you could have betrayed me to the law. And I will do what I will do, because I need the money. There it ends. I wish you wouldn't keep me waiting. I am becoming nervous. I have drugged his medicine until he needs it five times daily. Now he is demanding one at bedtime. Why wait?"

"Are you sure of the poison?"

"Quite sure. It is the same that I gave you to test on the monkey that you packed in ice and sent to Delhi to be autopsied. It is a vegetable poison. It escapes analysis by all known methods. It is one of five poisons that baffle analysis, once it has become absorbed by the blood. They will find in your uncle's stomach, if they look, some traces of marijuana, which it can be proved that he himself bought, and which I added to his tonic at his own written request. I advise you to act quickly."

Rundhia nodded. "If you will attend to the killing of Norwood, I will let you do the other job tonight. But I want Norwood out of the way."

There was a chill at Lynn's heart. As she walked beside the Maharane into the room, that was called the boudoir but retained the sumptuous, old-fashioned splendors of a royal boudoir, she felt more self-critical than ever before in her life. Not even Aunt Harding's cruellest accusations had made her feel as guilty, and as impotent to undo wrong.

"Lynn darling, why are you silent? I can almost always count on you for chatter when I feel despondent."

"Maharane, did you ever betray anyone?"

"Let us sit here by the window," said the Maharane. "Tell me how it feels. Perhaps I can help you to feel differently. You have helped me in so many ways. There is a law of compensation. Perhaps

"No, he didn't ask me to promise."

comes now my opportunity to do for you what you have done for me."

"I hate myself," Lynn answered. "You can't change that. I don't want it changed. If I didn't hate myself for what I've done, I wouldn't be fit to live. The dreadful part is that I can't undo what I did. Oh, my God—she put her hands between her hands—I didn't mean to do it. If I could cut out my tongue! But I said it. I can't unsay it."

"Lynn darling, did you promise Captain Norwood not to speak about those diamonds?"

"No. He didn't ask me to promise. He took it for granted that I wouldn't mention what any idiot could guess he hadn't wanted me to see. Captain Norwood saw me kissing Rundhia. I know he did."

"Did he say so?"

"Of course he didn't. And of course he won't mention it, ever, to anyone else. The man is a gentleman. I don't want him to despise me, yet it wouldn't bother me if Rundhia did."

"Perhaps you don't yet understand Rundhia."

"Oh, yes I do. Rundhia is a beautiful savage."

"Darling, did you ask him not to tell?"

"I made it quite clear I was sorry I had told him."

"Well, you must remember that you told him something that concerns the State of Kadur. You uncovered to him the existence of a bribe that might have changed the destiny of Kadur by legalizing the priests' possession of the diamond mine. I haven't told you much about the diamond mine. It is supposed to be a secret. Do you call it a betrayal that I have mentioned it to you?"

"Don't worry. I won't tell!" Lynn answered. "I never want to hear diamonds mentioned again. How long will it take that messenger to reach Captain Norwood?"

"That depends on where Captain Norwood is. The messenger will have to look for him. He has gone on horseback. I ordered him not to spare the horse. It might take him half an hour—an hour."

"I can't wait for an answer! I wish I had gone in search of him, myself. I haven't any pride left. His career will be ruined, won't it?"

"But darling, he deserves to be ruined if he accepts bribes. And if he is innocent he can prove it."

"Do you believe that? I can easily doubt it," Lynn answered. "I have never once been able to prove my innocence, against Aunt's accusations. Not one single once! Not one time—ever. To this minute, she believes everything she has ever said against me." Then, suddenly: "What is Rundhia doing?"

"Does he like to be despised?"

"Lynn dear, if you should despise him, I don't know what might happen. Rundhia loves you."

"Does he? You think so? Tell him I despise him! And I will, until he proves to me that he has done his absolute, utmost best to undo the cowardly wrong he has done to Captain Norwood. You may say I will help in whatever way I possibly can. But if he doesn't do his best for Captain Norwood, I will never speak to him again."

"Lynn—"

"Maharane dear, won't you please tell him? I mean it. He might believe you."

The Maharane sighed. She left Lynn and walked out of the room to find Rundhia.

Lynn was seated in the armchair by the window, staring at an illustrated magazine, when the Maharane came back.

"Darling, Rundhia has promised."

"What did he promise to do? What can he do?"

"I mean that Captain Norwood can be cleared of the charge of bribery," the Maharane answered. "However, Rundhia made a condition."

"Maharane dear! Tell me. Don't prepare me for it. I can take it without our pretending it's something else."

"Very well," said the Maharane. "Let us be quite frank with each other. Rundhia loves you."

"So says Rundhia."

"And I love you."

"I can believe that," Lynn answered. "Why else should you be so kind? I haven't influence or money."

"You have personality," the Maharane answered. "You have imagination and spirit. You can redeem Rundhia. So that when the day comes that he shall be Maharajah of Kadur, he will be a great man. Rundhia will do anything for you—anything. Your influence will persuade him to do good things, of that I am sure. Even now, having known you only one day, for your sake he is willing to save Captain Norwood. But he makes conditions."

"Can't he tell them to me?"

"He has gone in search of that creature Gulbaz. Rundhia has taken it for granted that you will accept the conditions, since he has accepted, as a command, your wish that he should help Captain Norwood."

Lynn almost lost her temper. She retorted: "I was treacherous. So was Rundhia. I don't believe Captain Norwood has been! I won't believe it until they prove it."

The Maharane returned to her subject: "Rundhia insists that you mustn't tell Captain Norwood whose influence it was that saved him. He demands—and I think that is fair, isn't it?—Rundhia can't afford to be compromised—he demands that if Captain Norwood should characteristically force his way into your presence, you will not answer Norwood's questions."

"But I have asked Captain Norwood to come and see me."

The Maharane's sympathy looked genuine. Lynn didn't doubt it: "Lynn dear, Rundhia thinks that Captain Norwood probably believes you told about the diamonds because you knew that Captain Norwood was embarrassed by your having seen them, and you wished to punish him for remarks he had made, in the garden, last night. Rundhia thinks that perhaps Captain Norwood won't answer your letter."

Lynn was silent for a long time, thinking. The Maharane watched her, reading, on Lynn's face, the course of the struggle between pride, humiliation, anger—and some other, western emotion that not even Lynn could have put into words. It was too simple. Too elementary. It escaped analysis. At last Lynn spoke:

"I promise. I won't tell Captain Norwood that Rundhia is helping him. But will Rundhia do it?"

"For you he will do anything," the Maharane answered.
